Showcasing achievement in law

DEBO NWAUZU
Author and Publisher

Debo Nwauzu is a non-practising solicitor and is the founder and Chair of Totally Management Ltd, which owns BLD. She is also the Chair of BLD Foundation's Board of Trustees. In addition, Debo is, and has been since 1986, a barrister and a solicitor of the Supreme Court of Nigeria.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Black Letter Law has come a long way since its first publication in 2006. This year, for the first time, it will be available in three mediums - online, as an eBook and in print. The publication has been trimmed to 10 sections, each renamed with more succinct and easily identifiable titles.

In making Black Letter Law accessible and free online, it can now have a truly global audience, including the emerging markets. With fresh developers and our new designer, Ken, we now have online features, articles and videos, including video interviews with some of those featured in the publication. There is also an annual subscription offer too, with minimal costs providing many benefits, including unlimited downloads of the eBook and the facility for entrants to update their online profiles. It is an exciting time with many opportunities.

I am often asked why I started the publication and why I have continued with it. I started Black Letter Law because there was, and still is, nothing that does what this publication does. There was nothing to show my children, and indeed all children (not just our biological offspring) about the achievement and contribution of ethnic minorities, both past and present. I sometimes overuse this, but I feel very passionately that to know where you are going, it is important to know where you are coming from and this applies to our children, who are our future. It is for this reason that I have dedicated this book to them, in the hope that they are inspired by those showcased, going back to the 1800s, to forge their own future, a future that is hopefully better than ours. I have to be completely honest, though, that if I knew for sure what I know now, about the sheer hard work and the costs involved in producing Black Letter Law, my decision to start it may well have been very different back then in 2006!

Why do I continue? The achievements of the entrants in the publication truly inspire and energise me - like those of my immediate family - and I enjoy and celebrate them! I have also known many others who have been similarly inspired by Black Letter Law - it's a great resource, which will prove even more bountiful with its online facilities and features.

As always, I thank Shelagh for her relentless hard work, energy and enthusiasm! I also thank my children for keeping me well-grounded, the entrants for making the publication possible, the advertisers for keeping it alive and the Law Society, yet again for its great support of the publication.

FOREWORD

It gives me great pleasure to have been asked to write the Foreword to this edition of Black Letter Law. At a time when the current economic conditions make it even more challenging to enter and progress within the profession for candidates from black and Asian backgrounds, the importance of a publication such as Black Letter Law cannot be overstated.

Access to, and the lack of positive black and Asian role models in, the profession has been well documented. If we want to inspire the next generation of young ethnic minority students to think about a career in Law, we must identify and profile those who have carved out a successful career as a solicitor.

Black Letter Law is just one of a number of initiatives run by the Black Lawyers Directory (BLD) aimed at making the profession more diverse. The Legal Launch Pad and Today's Children, Tomorrow's Lawyers are two innovative programmes which have shaped and supported the career aspirations of young people who have limited awareness and access to the legal world.

Black Letter Law is an inspirational source of information for young black and Asian people who aspire towards a legal career and a useful tool for anyone interested in the positive contribution made by black and Asian lawyers in the profession. The publication has gone from strength to strength, providing a useful tool for those looking for some career inspiration. The growth in the number of personal profiles is a testament to the successful mark that black and Asian lawyers are beginning to make on the profession.

Our challenge now is to encourage, develop and support young talent for the future.

BLACK LETTER LAW SHOWCASING ACHIEVEMENT IN LAW

"Black Letter Law highlights a considerable well of talent in the legal profession from which we all can, and we all should, draw and drink."

Barbara Lockwood of Antler QC

"The ground-breaking publication is the first to highlight the achievements of notable black and ethnic minority lawyers — past and present."

Frances Gibb, Legal Editor of The Times

Black Letter Law, first published in 2006, is a publication that showcases the contribution and achievement of those of African, Asian, Caribbean and other ethnic minority backgrounds in the legal profession.

Ng Achoy

Ng Achoy was the first known person of Chinese origin to be called to the Bar (Lincoln's Inn) in 1877. Ng was from Hong Kong.

Mark Afeevea

Mark Afeevea is a barrister at Matrix Chambers. He is reputed to be the first ever barrister to have been instructed by a Premiership footballer to negotiate the terms of the player's transfer. He is a specialist in Sports, Employment/Discrimination and Media and Entertainment Law and has been ranked for many years in the legal directories as a leading junior in both Sports and Employment/Discrimination Law.

See also The Bar section.

Aviet Agabeg

Aviet Agabeg became the first known Asian member of the Inner Temple in 1864. From Calcutta, he attended St John's College, Cambridge and was called to the Bar in 1868. Aviet was reputed to have written several legal books and said to have returned to India in 1897.

Syed Ameer Ali

Syed Ameer Ali was appointed to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in 1909, becoming the first Indian to sit as a Law Lord of the Privy Council in England. He was born in Cuttack, Orissa, India on 6 April 1849 and was one of five brothers. Syed was educated at Hoogly College and graduated from Calcutta University in 1867 – one of the first Muslim graduates in India. He obtained a Master's with honours in History in 1868 and the following year gained his Bachelor of Laws. He went on to win one of the then newly-instituted State scholarships for selected Indian students to pursue higher studies in England. In London, Syed was called to the Bar (Inner Temple) in 1873. He returned to India that year, practising in Calcutta. The following year, he was elected as a Fellow of Calcutta University and was also appointed as a lecturer in Islamic Law at the Presidency College. He is reputed to have been one of the first leaders with the clear vision that Muslims should organise themselves politically if they were to have an honoured place in Indian public life. He established the Central National Muhammadan Association in 1877 and worked for the political advancement of Muslims. In 1878 he was appointed as a member of the Bengal Legislative Council and in 1883 was nominated for membership of the Governor General Council. He became a judge in the Calcutta High Court in 1890 and retired in 1904, when he moved back to England. He established the London Muslim League in 1908 – an independent body which was not affiliated to the All India Muslim League - and in 1910 he established the first mosque in London.

Edward Akufo-Addo

Edward Akufo-Addo was a politician and lawyer in Ghana and one of the Big Six in the fight for the country's independence. He became the Chief Justice and later the President. Edward came to England after winning a scholarship to St Peter's College, Oxford where he studied Philosophy, Politics and Economics. After gaining his degree he decided to read Law and enrolled at Middle Temple. He was called to the Bar in 1940 and returned to what was then the Gold Coast in Ghana a year later. After his pupillage he established his own chambers, specialising in Civil Law cases. The then Attorney-General once grudgingly described him as "the most able advocate of the Gold Coast". In 1947 he became a founding member of the United Gold Coast Convention and was one of the Big Six jailed after riots in Accra in 1948. A year later he became a member of the Gold Coast Legislative Council and the Coussey Constitutional Commission. After 21 years at the Bar, Edward became a Supreme Court Judge between 1962 and 1964. He was one of three judges who sat in the treason trial after a bomb attack on President Kwame Nkrumah – but he and his fellow judges were dismissed for finding some of those accused not guilty. However, he was reinstated under the National Liberation Council (NLC) regime and between 1966 and 1970 was the Chief Justice as well as Chairman of the Constitutional Commission. He was also head of the NLC Political Commission. When the Constitution, which he helped to formulate and draft, came into force, Edward was elected President of Ghana in the Second Republic in 1970 and remained so until the government was overthrown in January 1972. Edward's Presidential post was ceremonial as the executive powers lay with the Prime Minister. He died in 1979. Nana Addo Dankwa Akufo-Addo, his son, was the Attorney-General and Minister of Justice between 2001 and 2003 and was then Minister for Foreign Affairs between 2003 and 2007. Nana came second in a closely-fought presidential election in Ghana in 2008 and is running for Presidency again in 2012.

Nana Addo Dankwa Akufo-Addo

Nana Addo Dankwa Akufo-Addo is a politician and lawyer. He trained as a lawyer in England and was called to the Bar (Middle Temple) in July 1971 as well as the Ghanaian Bar in July 1975. Nana was one of the founding members of the centrist New Patriotic Party (NPP) in 1992 and was also the founder and first chairperson of the Ghana Committee on Human and People's Rights. Under President John Kufuor he was the Attorney-General and Minister of Justice between 2001 and 2003 and was then Minister for Foreign Affairs between 2003 and 2007 when, in accordance with his party's rules, he resigned to seek presidential nomination of his party. He was elected as the presidential candidate in 2007 and came second in a closely-fought election in 2008. Nana followed in the footsteps of his father, Edward Akufo-Addo, who was the Chief Justice and later the President of Ghana. Nana is now running for President again in 2012.

Paul Boateng, Baron Boateng

Paul Boateng became the UK's first black Cabinet Minister of African ancestry in May 2002, when he was appointed as Chief Secretary to the Treasury under the Labour Party Government of Tony Blair. On 28 May 2010 it was announced that he would become a member of the House of Lords and was raised to the peerage as Baron Boateng of Akyem in the Republic of Ghana and of Wembley in the London Borough of Brent.

Thomas Morris Chester

Thomas Morris Chester, who was born in the US in 1834, is believed to have been the first African American to qualify as a barrister in England. He was admitted to Middle Temple in 1867 and was called to the Bar in 1870. Thomas's mother was a slave who escaped from Baltimore in 1825 and Thomas was therefore born free. His father was an oysterman/restaurant owner. Thomas's secondary education was in Monrovia, Liberia in West Africa (he was later to be the founder of The Star of Liberia newspaper) and then attended the Thetford Academy in Vermont, US. He returned to the US in 1859 following his father's death and lectured on the abolition of the slave trade. He was involved in the recruitment drive of African American troops during the American Civil War and was said to have been largely responsible for the formation of the Massachusetts 54th and 55th Regiments, which were immortalised in the Oscar-winning film Glory. He was elevated to the rank of Captain in the US Army, becoming the first African American in history to do so and was also the first African American war correspondent, writing for the established Philadelphia Press. After the American Civil War, Thomas also became a diplomat. On his return to America from England in 1870, Thomas was admitted to the Pennsylvania and District of Columbia Bars and was also appointed District Superintendent of Education, Brigadier General of the Louisiana State Militia and became the President of a railroad building company.

Herbert Wiltshire Chitepo

Herbert Wiltshire Chitepo was the first African from Southern Rhodesia (now Zimbabwe) to become a barrister and went on to lead the Zimbabwe African National Union's fight to liberate the country from its white-minority government. He was assassinated on 18 March 1975. Herbert was born in Watsomba, Southern Rhodesia, in 1923 and was educated in South Africa. He qualified as a teacher in 1945, but after a year in the job decided to study Law. He graduated from Fort Hare University in South Africa in 1949 and came to England. He was called to the Bar (Gray's Inn) and was a research assistant at the School of Oriental and African Studies. In 1954 he returned to Rhodesia and a special law was required to allow him to occupy chambers with white colleagues. He defended African nationalists in court and in 1961 served as legal adviser to Joshua Nkomo, founder of the Zimbabwe

African Peoples Union (ZAPU) at the Southern Rhodesia Constitutional Conference in London. The following year, 1962, ZAPU was banned and Herbert went into voluntary exile. He became Tanganyika's first African Director of Public Prosecutions. In 1963, following a split within ZAPU between Nkomo and Ndabaningi Sithole, Herbert joined the latter and was elected the founding Chairman of the Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU), a post he held until 1974. At the same time Nkomo founded the PCC-ZAPU (later shortened to ZAPU again). In 1964 both parties were banned and the leaders arrested. Their supporters left the country and formed armies operating from outside the country's borders. In 1966 Herbert resigned as Director of Public Prosecutions and moved to Zambia to concentrate on the armed struggle, having been given the power of leadership whilst Sithole was in detention. He was assassinated in Zambia when a bomb, placed in his car the night before, exploded and mystery still surrounds who was responsible.

Christian Frederick Cole

Christian Frederick Cole - second son of clergyman Jacob Cole, of Kissy, Sierra Leone - was black African. He matriculated as a non-collegiate student at the University of Oxford in 1873, was admitted to Inner Temple in 1879 and called to the Bar in 1883. Christian seems to have been the first African student to join the University of Oxford and one of the first men of African origin to be called to the Bar.

Learie Nicholas Constantine, Baron Constantine

Learie Nicholas Constantine has been described as a legend in his time and had a multi-dimensional career, including being a barrister and a professional cricketer. He made history in many areas – he became the first black Rector of the University of St Andrews in Scotland in 1968, was the first black Governor of the BBC in 1968 and in 1969 became the first life peer of African descent. Learie was created Baron Constantine of Maraval in Trinidad and Tobago and of Nelson in the County Palatine of Lancaster. He was born in September 1901 in the twin-island state of Trinidad and Tobago and died in the UK in July 1971. By the age of 27 he had become a valuable member of the Trinidad and Tobago West Indies cricket teams but moved to Lancashire in 1928 and launched his professional career as a cricketer that was to last until 1941. He became the highest paid cricketer in the world and one of the highest paid sportsmen in Britain. Author and cricket researcher Nasser Khan described Learie as “a legend of his lifetime who raised the professional cricketer and the coloured people in the British Commonwealth to a level of respect never before accepted in Britain.” When the Second World War curtailed his cricket career, Learie became involved in fighting racial discrimination in Britain whilst working for the Ministry of Labour and National Service as a Welfare Office responsible for West Indians working in English factories. He was awarded an MBE when his job ended in 1946. He went on to become a broadcaster and writer before returning to the legal profession – had had worked in a solicitor’s office in Trinidad and Tobago before moving to England. He qualified as a lawyer in 1954, was called to the Bar (Middle Temple) in 1955 and became an Honorary Bencher of the Middle Temple in 1963. Learie was knighted in 1962, the same year he held the office of Trinidad High Commissioner to the UK. Twenty-nine years after his death, the Lancashire newspaper the Nelson Leader, hailed him as one of its “two men of the millennium”. In 1971 he was posthumously awarded the Trinity Cross, Trinidad and Tobago’s highest honour, and was inducted into the West Indian Tobacco Sports Foundation Hall of Fame in 1984.

Sir Desmond de Silva QC

Desmond de Silva QC, a barrister at Argent Chambers, is one of the country’s leading Queen’s Counsel and took silk in 1984 - the earliest of any barrister still practising today. He became a member of the Privy Council of the United Kingdom in October 2011 and is a former United Nations Chief War Crimes Prosecutor in Sierra Leone.

See also The Bar section

Dame Linda Dobbs

The Honourable Mrs Justice Dobbs DBE became Britain's first non-white High Court judge in 2004. Her several titles and accolades include Queen's Counsel, a number of doctorates and being a Dame of the British Empire. Linda sits in the Queen's Bench Division, which includes sitting in the Divisional and Administrative Courts and the Criminal Division of the Court of Appeal. She was called to the Bar in 1981 and took silk in 1998.

George Edalji

George Edalji's family endured much racial intolerance in Great Wyrley, near Birmingham – his father was Indian and his mother Scottish - and in 1903, when he was a successful solicitor, he was the victim of a notorious miscarriage of justice. He was found guilty of a series of macabre incidents, including the maiming of cattle and horses - and sentenced to seven years hard labour. A petition, signed by 10,000 people, brought about his release after three years. No reason was given, his name was not cleared and no compensation was awarded. Whilst George was happy to be free he couldn't practise as a solicitor because of the conviction. Sherlock Holmes author Sir Arthur Conan Doyle read about the case in the Press and felt compelled to act in December 1906. After meeting George and observing him reading a newspaper beforehand, Doyle wrote: "He held the paper close to his eyes and rather sideways, proving not only a high degree of myopia, but marked astigmatism. The idea of such a man scouring fields at night and assaulting cattle while avoiding the watching police was ludicrous." Doyle published his findings in the Daily Telegraph, stirring up the attention of both the public and the Government. At that time there was no procedure for a retrial so a private committee met to consider the matter. In the spring of 1907 the committee decided George was innocent of the mutilations, but still found him guilty of writing some anonymous letters associated with the case. The Law Society readmitted George and, partially as a result of the case, the Court of Criminal Appeal was established later that year.

Gifty Edila

Gifty Edila became the first female and the first ethnic minority Director of Law and Administration at the Royal Borough of Kensington and Chelsea in 2001. In February 2009 she swapped her role within that wealthiest local authority in the UK for the London Borough of Hackney, one of the hosts of the Olympic Games in 2012 and became its Corporate Director for Legal and Democratic Services.

See also the In House and the Legal Eves sections.

Tunji Fahm MBE

Tunji Fahm MBE was the first black ethnic minority lawyer to be appointed as a Chief Officer of a local authority legal department in the UK. He arrived in Cardiff, South Wales, from Nigeria in October 1954. He attended the Inns of Court School of Law in 1966 and was called to the Bar (Lincoln's Inn) in November 1967. He did his Master's at the London School of Economics in 1967 and he was involved in further legal studies at University College, London and at the Institute of Advanced Legal Studies (University of London). Tunji held various appointments in local government, both in the UK and abroad, including service as a Town Clerk to one of the municipalities and as a court officer in Zambia until 1974. He took up the post of the Chief Legal Officer for Islwyn (Borough) District Council in 1974 and became its Chief Monitoring Officer in 1978. He remained at Islwyn until 1996 when he returned to private practice. He stood as a Labour candidate for the Welsh Assembly in 2003 and 2007. Tunji was awarded an MBE in 2006 for services to the community in Wales.

Sunil Gadhia

Sunil Gadhia was the first person of Asian origin to attain the height of Chief Executive of a City law firm in 2003 and, at the age of 38, was also one of the youngest. Sunil rose from being a trainee at Stephenson Harwood in 1988, qualifying as a solicitor in 1990 and making partner in 1997 before assuming the top post. In May 2012 he joined Cleary Gottlieb Steen & Hamilton's London office as a partner and commercial litigator.

See also The Solicitors and the In the News sections.

Mahatma Gandhi

Mahatma Gandhi, the leader of the Indian nationalist movement against British rule, began his career as a lawyer. At the age of 19 he travelled to England to study at University College, London, before being admitted to Inner Temple. After being called to the Bar in 1891, Gandhi returned to Bombay, where he tried to establish a law practice. In April 1893 Gandhi was engaged to represent a Porbander firm in a case in South Africa and set sail for the continent. It is widely believed that it was Gandhi's experiences as a barrister in South Africa that set him on the path to activism. In South Africa Gandhi experienced the discrimination commonly directed at black Africans and Indians. One day in court, in Durban, the magistrate asked him to remove his turban. He refused and stormed out of the courtroom. In another incident he was thrown off a train at Pietermaritzburg, after refusing to move from the first class to a third class coach while holding a valid first class ticket.

Dr Frene Ginwala

Dr Frene Ginwala was the Speaker of the House in the South African parliament when the first democratic government, with Nelson Mandela as President, came into power in 1994 and she held the post until 2004. Frene was born in 1932 in Johannesburg. She was an active member of the African National Congress (ANC) and was sent into exile in 1960 when the party was banned. She came to England and was instrumental in the escape of the late ANC President Oliver Tambo and also helped Nelson Mandela to flee the country after he went underground. Frene went on to study Law at the University of London and after gaining her degree, obtained a Doctorate in Philosophy from the University of Oxford. She was called to the Bar (Inner Temple) and is now an Honorary Fellow of Linacre College, Oxford. Frene returned to Africa to become the managing editor of Tanzania's principal English-language newspaper. After 30 years in exile, she was able to go back to South Africa in 1990 when the ANC ban was lifted. She was a member of the Secretariat at Nelson Mandela's office and was the ANC's Deputy Head for the Commission for the Emancipation of Women before being elected as a member of parliament in 1994. Frene is currently the Co-Chairperson of Global Coalition for Africa, a member of the ANC National Executive Committee and the spokesperson for the ANC in the United Kingdom. She is also a lecturer at universities and institutions in a number of countries. Frene is the founding member and national convener of the Women's National Coalition and has published several books on apartheid and on gender issues.

Helen Grant MP

Helen Grant is the joint Parliamentary Under Secretary of State at the Ministry of Justice and for Women's and Equality issues. She became the first black female Conservative MP in 2010 when she won the seat for Maidstone and the Weald at the May general election.

See also The Legislature and the Executive, the Legal Eves and the In the News sections.

Kim Hollis QC

Kim Hollis became the UK's first female Asian QC when she took silk in 2002, having been called to the Bar (Gray's Inn) in 1979. She was appointed as a Bencher of Gray's Inn in 2008. Kim is a barrister at 25 Bedford Row Chambers and specialises in criminal defence - including very serious violent and sexual crimes, drugs and honour killings - fraud and Judicial Review.

See also The Bar and the Legal Eves sections.

Ajmalul Hossain QC

Ajmalul Hossain QC is a barrister at Selborne Chambers, an Employment Tribunals Chairman and a Senior Advocate of the Supreme Court of Bangladesh. He is also the senior partner of A Hossain & Associates, one of the leading commercial law firms of Bangladesh, based in Dhaka. He took silk in 1998 and was the first, and so far only known, Queen's Counsel of Bangladeshi origin.

See also The Bar and The Judiciary sections.

Alexander Kennedy Isbister

Alexander Kennedy Isbister, of Hudson Bay, who was part Native American, was admitted to Middle Temple in 1862.

Trevor James

Trevor James made UK history in December 2008 by becoming the first black managing partner at the London office of Morrison & Foerster, a leading US law firm and one of the 30 largest law firms in the world.

See also The Solicitors section.

Muhammad Ali Jinnah

Muhammad Ali Jinnah is known as the founder of Pakistan. Muhammad was the youngest known Indian to be a barrister as he was aged only 20 when he was called to the Bar (Lincoln's Inn) in 1896. He went on to become the first Governor General of the newly-formed Pakistan, in 1947. He has been variously hailed as one of the greatest legal luminaries India had produced during the first half of the 20th Century, a great constitutionalist, a distinguished Parliamentarian, an indefatigable freedom-fighter, a dynamic Muslim leader, a political strategist and above all one of the great nation-builders of modern times. Muhammad died on 11 September 1948.

Sibghat Kadri QC

Sibghat Kadri QC, Head of Chambers at 6 King's Bench Walk, was the joint founder (with Rudy Narayan) of the Society of Black Lawyers in 1973 and is a former BBC broadcaster. He is a leading authority on immigration and race relations and is the former Chairman of the Society of Afro-Asian and Caribbean Lawyers in the UK and President of the Standing Conference of Pakistani Organisations.

Sir Seretse Khama

Sir Seretse Khama was born on 1 July 1921 in Serowe, a British Protectorate of Bechuanaland, and went on to become Botswana's first prime minister and the country's founding president. Seretse's father was the paramount chief of the Bamangwato people and his grandfather was their king. When his grandfather, and subsequently his father, died Seretse became king at the age of four. He spent most of his youth in South African boarding schools and graduated from the Fort Hare University College in 1944. He came to Britain to study Law at Balliol College, Oxford before joining the Inner Temple in 1946 and becoming a barrister. In 1947, whilst still in Britain, he fell in love with a white woman, Ruth Williams, and they were married a year later. When he returned to his homeland, the British Government launched a parliamentary inquiry into whether he was fit to rule his people. Although the outcome of the investigation was overwhelmingly in Seretse's favour, "but for his unfortunate marriage", the government - under heavy pressure from apartheid South Africa and Southern Rhodesia - suppressed the findings (which lasted 30 years) and banished the couple. Seretse refused to divorce Ruth and they were forced to move back to Britain in 1950, where they lived in exile for six years. Under international pressure for its apparent racism, Britain relented and allowed the couple to return in 1956, but only after Seretse renounced his tribal throne. Seretse pursued his interest in politics, was elected to the tribal council in 1957 and in 1962 founded the Bechuanaland Democratic Party, campaigning for multi-racial reform. His party dominated the elections in 1965 and he was elected Prime Minister of Bechuanaland. Seretse continued to campaign for his country's independence, which was achieved the following year, 1966, and he became Botswana's first president. Also in 1966, the Queen knighted him. He famously made a call in 1970 for Africans to discover and write their own history. A key passage was: "A nation without a past is a lost nation, and a people without a past is a people without a soul." Seretse was re-elected as president twice and died in office in 1980. His eldest son, Seretse Khama Ian Khama (known as Ian Khama) is the current President of Botswana and the Paramount Chief of the Bamangwato tribe.

Imran Khan

Imran Khan is the senior partner and Head of Crime and Actions Against Police Departments at the London-based law firm Imran Khan & Partners, which was established in 2000. He is one of the better-known human rights and criminal lawyers in the UK. He represented the family of Stephen Lawrence following Stephen's murder in 1993 and it brought him to national and international attention. With the help of Imran and Michael Mansfield QC, the family brought Britain's first private prosecution for a racist murder – and the fourth ever private prosecution for murder. That trial, however, collapsed and the family pressed for a Government inquiry that resulted in the Macpherson Report, published on 24 February, 1998. In his report, Lord Macpherson cited "institutionalised racism" in the police force and the report resulted in unprecedented apologies, procedural changes and also vindication for the Lawrence family in their unrelenting pursuit for justice. The double jeopardy rule was also changed which made a second prosecution possible and ended in the convictions in January 2012 of two men who had denied murdering Stephen. In August 2012 a judge refused to grant the two leave to appeal against their convictions. In an interview with BLD, as Lawyer of the Month in October 2006, Imran described the moment he was given the Stephen Lawrence file as the "defining aspect" of his existence and in a BLD interview in 2012, he described the unsuccessful private prosecution as his "failure" and the eventual convictions as a "successful redemption". He and Doreen Lawrence OBE, Stephen's mother, were both honoured for their contribution to justice at the 2012 Legal Aid Lawyer of the Year (LALY) awards. Imran was presented with an Outstanding Achievement award and Doreen, the first non-lawyer to receive such an accolade, received the LALY 10th Anniversary Special Award. In addition, he was named as one of the Times Law 100 most influential judges and lawyers of 2012. Imran is also a Higher Courts Advocate, appearing at the Old Bailey and other Crown Courts in England.

Sadiq Khan MP

Sadiq Khan has been the Labour MP for Tooting, South West London, since 2005 and became the Shadow Secretary of State for Justice in October 2010. In 2009 Sadiq became the first Asian and first Muslim to ever attend Cabinet when he was appointed as Secretary of State for Transport. He was also only the second Muslim Privy Counsellor – the first one being Syed Ameer Ali exactly a century before. Sadiq was named as one of the Times Law 100 most influential judges and lawyers of 2012.

John Kofi Agyekum Kufuor

John Kofi Agyekum Kufuor was the second president of the 4th Republic of Ghana between 2000 and 2009. When he was elected, it was the first time that power had changed hands by peaceful means in the country's 43-year history following independence in 1957. John was born in Kumasi, Ghana in 1939, and was the seventh of 10 children whose parents were from a royal Ashanti family. He came to England in 1959 to study Law and was called to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn in 1961 (at the age of 22). He took the unconventional step of enrolling to read Politics, Philosophy and Economics at Exeter College, Oxford after his call to the Bar. After obtaining his Master's at Oxford in 1964, John returned to Ghana in 1965 and was in private practice until 1969 when he became Kumasi's chief legal officer and city manager. From then on his attention turned to politics and in 1969 he took up his first government post as Deputy Foreign Minister. However, in 1972 the military overthrew the government and John was one of several high-ranking officials to be imprisoned. After a year-long detention he withdrew from the political scene and took up a post as Chairman of the Ashanti Brick and Construction Company until entering politics again in 1979. More than two decades later - with a president election slogan of “Zero Tolerance for Corruption” and the promise of positive change - he led the New Patriotic Party (NPP) to victory in 2000. He was re-elected in 2004 and under his eight-year leadership, Ghana’s gross domestic product quadrupled from £2.6 billion in 2000 to almost £11 billion in 2009, when he stood down as President, in accordance with the constitution. During his tenure his government had halved the level of poverty, increased the number of children in primary school by almost a quarter, introduced free medical care for the poor and free school. Later in 2009 he was named as a Global Ambassador against Hunger for the United Nations World Food Programme.

Roger Leyland

Born John Roger Nowell Leyland, Roger joined international law firm Herbert Smith in 1985 as an associate in the firm’s Property Department (as it was then known), becoming a partner two years later. He was the first black partner of a leading City firm. In addition to his manifest legal skills, he was also an accomplished musician and many who heard him play believed he had the talent to have made a successful career as a classical pianist. He also took a close interest in the development of the representation of ethnic minorities in the profession and was particularly interested in legal education, sitting as a governor on the Council of the College of Law. He died in 1996 at the young age of 43. Herbert Smith, in association with the College of Law, funds an annual prize for black and Asian students in his memory.

Nelson Mandela

Nelson Rolihlahla Mandela, born on 18 July 1918, was the first President of South Africa to be elected in fully representative democratic elections. Before his Presidency he was a prominent anti-apartheid activist and leader of the African National Congress (ANC). He qualified as a lawyer in South Africa and in 1952 opened his own law practice in Johannesburg with his partner, Oliver Tambo, another ANC stalwart. He was imprisoned for 27 years for his involvement in underground armed resistance activities. Throughout his imprisonment he became the most widely-known figure in the struggle against South African apartheid, largely because he consistently refused to compromise his political position to obtain freedom. After his release in 1990, Mandela facilitated a peaceful transition to fully-representative democracy in South Africa. He was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1993. His contribution to the British legal profession was to be elected an Honorary Bencher of Lincoln's Inn in 1994. He was made an honorary Queen's Counsel by the Department of Constitutional Affairs in 2000. He celebrated his 90th birthday with a giant concert at London's Hyde Park on 27 June 2008 in support of his AIDS campaign. The 46664 Campaign – named after his prison number – aims to raise awareness of the HIV/AIDS epidemic in sub-Saharan Africa. Exactly 46664 tickets went on sale for the concert, which attracted stars from the world of international entertainment to perform. In July 2010, just before his 92nd birthday, he provided a World Cup dream finale by appearing at the Soccer City stadium in Johannesburg. Almost 85,000 spectators rose to their feet to give him a thunderous welcome. He had had to pull out of the opening ceremony after the death of his great-granddaughter in a car accident hours before. In 2012 he celebrated his 94th birthday with a "quiet" family gathering at his home in the village of Qunu in the Eastern Cape of South Africa. Some 12 million children across the country sang a song, especially composed, as part of the official celebrations.

Alfred Mangena

Alfred Mangena was the first black South African to return to his homeland as a barrister in 1910 and went on to become a co-founder of the African National Congress (ANC). Alfred was born in Natal around 1879 and was educated privately in Cape Town. He studied Law in England and was called to the Bar (Lincoln's Inn) in 1909. When he returned to South Africa to set up a practice in Johannesburg he encountered immense difficulty in becoming a solicitor of the Supreme Court – because he was a "native". He fought and won the case, paving the way for future black lawyers, the next of whom was Pixley ka Isaka Seme who returned to his homeland the year after Alfred. Both had met whilst in London at the South African Native Convention, which was monitoring the progress of the draft South Africa Act through Parliament in 1909. Pixley set up his own private practice but he and Alfred later went into partnership together in 1916, defending their people in the Law Courts. Alfred and Pixley and two others lawyers who had been educated in England – Richard Msimang and George Montsio - called for a convention of Africans to form the South African Native National Congress (SANNC) and in January 1912 the organisation was founded. Alfred was appointed Senior Treasurer. The group, which was renamed as the ANC in 1923, led the struggle for political, social and economic rights for black South Africans. Alfred died in 1924.

Michel Massih QC

Michel Massih QC, a barrister at Tooks Chambers, is the first and only known Queen's Counsel of Palestinian origin. In over 25 years he has defended some of the most notorious leading criminal cases in the UK and in February 2008 he was named Criminal Lawyer of the Year by the Society of Asian Lawyers.

George Montsio

George Montsio was a co-founder of the African National Congress (ANC). He studied Law in England and was called to the Bar (Lincoln's Inn) before returning to South Africa as one of just three African barristers in the country in the early 1900s. George was admitted as a solicitor of the Supreme Court of South Africa and set up a practice in Pietersburg, Transvaal. He joined three other lawyers who had been educated in England - Pixley ka Isaka Seme, Alfred Mangena and Richard Msimang – and together they called for a convention of Africans to form the South African Native National Congress (SANNC). In January 1912 the organisation was founded to lead the struggle for political, social and economic rights for black South Africans. The group was renamed as the ANC in 1923.

Richard Msimang

Richard Msimang was a co-founder of the African National Congress (ANC) who spent a decade in England and qualified as a lawyer – after attending Queen's College, Taunton, in Somerset - before returning to South Africa in 1910 to open a legal practice in Johannesburg. He joined three other lawyers who had been educated in England - Pixley ka Isaka Seme, Alfred Mangena and George Montsio – and together they called for a convention of Africans to form the South African Native National Congress (SANNC). In January 1912 the organisation was founded to lead the struggle for political, social and economic rights for black South Africans and in 1919 Richard chaired a committee that compiled its constitution. The group was renamed as the ANC in 1923. His younger brother, Henry Selby Msimang, was also a member of the movement and was imprisoned for advising black workers during a strike for better pay. Richard and Henry were the sons of Joel Msimang, who founded the Independent Methodist Church in South Africa. Richard died in 1933.

Rudy Narayan

Rudy Narayan was the joint founder, with Sibghat Kadri QC, of the Society of Black Lawyers (SBL) in 1973. SBL's aim was to promote the rights and welfare of minority lawyers as well as those in the community who needed legal protection. Rudy, a legendary campaigner for black people, was born in May 1938 in former British Guiana, the ninth of 10 children whose family came to Britain in 1953. He died at the age of 60 in 1998. In November 2010 he was honoured with a commemorative Blue Heritage Plaque (unveiled by His Excellency Laleshwar K. N. Singh, High Commissioner for Guyana) at his former offices in Lambeth. Rudy and Sibghat formed the Afro-Asian and Caribbean Lawyers Association in 1969. It was renamed the SBL, with Sibghat as the Chair between 1979 and 1983 and Rudy its General Secretary. He was highly respected by many lawyers, including Courtenay Griffith QC and Sibghat. In an interview with Black Letter Law editorial director and publisher Debo Nwauzu, for a Lawyer of the Month feature, Sibghat recalled how the two of them had fought continuous battles against racism in courts and the profession generally. Courtenay was asked in a BLD interview who was the person he most admired (dead or alive). He replied: "My hero is Rudy Narayan. He paved the way for minority lawyers today and he did it with style and fearlessly." UK Rights – the online newspaper of the United Kingdom for Human Rights – refers to Rudy as: "Defender of the poor, the disadvantaged and the minorities. Voice for the voiceless." Rudy was also an author and a BBC television series, called Black Silk, was based partly on one of his books, Black Community on Trial, which was published in 1977. The Bar Council brought several disciplinary proceedings against Rudy and eventually disbarred him in 1994.

Jawaharlal Nehru

Jawaharlal Nehru is best-known as one of the most important leaders of the Indian Independence Movement, the head of the Indian National Congress, and the first Prime Minister of India on independence on 15 August 1947. He was the only son of an Allahabad-based barrister. Jawaharlal followed in his father's footsteps by becoming a barrister in 1912. He attended Harrow School and later read natural sciences at Trinity College, Cambridge. After being called to the English Bar, Jawaharlal returned to India in 1912 to practise law in the Allahabad High Court before entering into politics. He remained the Prime Minister of India for 17 years and can rightly be called the architect of modern India. He was a prolific writer and wrote a number of books, including The Discovery of India, Glimpses of World History and his autobiography Towards Freedom (1936), which ran nine editions in the first year alone. Emotional sensitivity and intellectual passion infused his writings, giving them unusual appeal and topicality even today. Jawaharlal, who died in 1964, loved and was loved by children and his birthday, 14 November, is observed as Children's Day in India. His only child, Indira Gandhi and her son, Rajiv Gandhi, were also Prime Ministers of India.

Anthony Robinson

Anthony Robinson was the Director, Casework and Litigation, at the Equality and Human Rights Commission (EHRC). He was also formerly the Director of Law at the Commission for Racial Equality (CRE) and was the last person to hold this post before the organisation was merged into the EHRC in 2007. Anthony is also a qualified mediator and a qualified project manager. When he took up his appointment with the CRE he became the head of a 60-strong core staff - comprising 20 lawyers, 20 caseworkers and 20 support staff - and had an annual budget of £4.5 million. Anthony was responsible for some ground-breaking formal investigations, including the investigation into discrimination in the police forces and the investigation into regeneration. In addition to his legal and enforcement role in Britain, Anthony and his team played a key role in the CRE's European and international legal work as part of the CRE's European and International Strategy.

Patricia Scotland QC, Baroness Scotland of Asthal

Patricia Scotland QC is a barrister at 4 Paper Builders and has previously served in many ministerial positions within the Government, most notably as the Attorney General for England and Wales. She made history five times. The first time was in 1991 when she became the first black female Queen's Counsel and one of the youngest ever QCs at the age of 35. The second time was in 1997 when she (as Baroness Scotland of Asthal, in the County of Oxfordshire) and Baroness Amos became the first black women to become members of the House of Lords. She then went on to become the first black woman to assume the post of a Government Minister and in 2000 she was approved to sit as the first black female Deputy High Court Judge. On 28 June 2007 she became the Attorney General, the first ethnic minority lawyer and the first female to assume the post, which she held until the new coalition Government took office in May 2010. Pixley ka Isaka Seme Pixley ka Isaka Seme, who was a lawyer, political activist and journalist, became a co-founder of the African National Congress (ANC) in 1912. He was born on 1 October 1881 in Natal and his primary education was at a local mission school. However, an American missionary took him under his wing and arranged for him to go to a school in America. He went on to become the first black South African to graduate from Columbia University, in New York, winning its highest oratorical honour on his subject of "The Regeneration of Africa". The university later awarded him an Honorary Doctorate of Law in 1928. With financial assistance from missionaries, Pixley left Columbia University - where he had obtained a Bachelor of Arts degree - to read Civil Law at Jesus College, Oxford in 1906 and became the first Zulu to graduate in 1909. The following year he was called to the Bar (Middle Temple) and practised as a barrister in London for a year. Whilst in London he met Alfred Mangena at the South African Native Convention, which was monitoring the progress of the draft South Africa Act through Parliament in 1909. When Pixley returned to South Africa in 1911 he set up a private practice in Johannesburg and later went into partnership with Alfred, who had returned to his homeland a year earlier than Pixley as the first black South African to qualify as a barrister. Although Pixley's academic success made him a respected figure within the African community, he still had to suffer the indignity walking up five flights of stairs to consult with counsel because he was forbidden to use the lift. Pixley and Alfred and two other lawyers who had been educated in England – Richard Msimang and George Montsio - called for a convention of Africans to form the South African Native National Congress (SANNC) and in January 1912 the organisation was founded. The group, which was renamed as the ANC in 1923, led the struggle for political, social and economic rights for black South Africans and Pixley was its President between 1930 and 1936. Pixley, who was married and had four sons and one daughter, also helped to launch the country's first newspaper for black people in 1912. He died in 1951.

Leila Seth

Leila Seth was the first woman to top the Bar examinations in London – and just three months after giving birth to her youngest child. She went on to become the first woman judge in the Delhi High Court and the first woman Chief Justice in India. Leila studied Law in London because it was the only course where attendance was not strict. On returning to India, she started practising Law in the Patna and Calcutta High Courts in 1959, at a time when women lawyers were considered rare commodities. Leila argued on a variety of matters, from tax to civil procedure and constitutional law. Her efforts led to her election as a Senior Advocate of the Supreme Court of India in 1977. Leila chairs the Commonwealth Human Rights Initiative as well as the Multiple Action Research Group and serves as the Vice-President of the World Wildlife Fund. She has also been a passionate advocate of free and compulsory education of children. Her own children grew up to be: writer Vikram Seth, peace activist Shantum and film-maker Aradhana. Leila's autobiography, On Balance, was published in 2003 and her book, We, the Children of India - The Preamble to our Constitution, was published in 2010.

Sir Mota Singh QC

Sir Mota Singh QC became the UK's first Sikh and Asian circuit judge in 1982. His appointment attracted news headlines because he wore a white turban instead of a judge's wig in court and it was seen as a sign of a multicultural Britain. In 2010 he also became the first Sikh of Indian origin to be knighted by the Queen. The honour was bestowed on the now-retired judge for his services to the administration of justice, community relations and to the voluntary sector. Sir Mota has been a prominent member of Britain's Asian community and sits on several trusts and board. In May 2010 he received the Pride of Sikh Community Award. Sir Mota was born and raised in Kenya. He came to England in 1954 to complete the remaining part of his Law studies and then returned to Kenya, where he practised for eight years. He moved back to the UK in the 1960s and established a successful practice in Civil Law. He was called to the Bar in 1967 and appointments followed as a Queen's Counsel (1978), a Recorder of the Crown Court, a Deputy Judge and then a circuit judge.

Sir Rabinder Singh

The Honourable Mr Justice Singh became Britain's second ethnic minority High Court judge (assigned to the Queen's Bench Division) and the first Sikh to assume the role in October 2011. The same year, in November, he was named as the ninth most powerful Asian in the country by publications Garavi Gujarat (GG2) and Eastern Eye (EE) and in 2012 he featured as one of the Times Law 100 most influential judges and lawyers. Rabinder was a founding member at Matrix Chambers in 2000 and was a leading silk at all levels from the Employment Tribunal to the Privy Council, the Supreme Court, the European Court of Justice and the European Court of Human Rights. He was appointed as a Deputy High Court judge in 2003, becoming the first person of Asian origin and the youngest person, at 39, to sit in the High Court..

Cornelia Sorabji

Cornelia Sorabji was born in Bombay and both her mother and father were Indian. Cornelia was called to the English Bar in 1923 and in 1924 went on to become the second barrister in India after gaining the right to practise in the Calcutta High Court. Cornelia became the first female student of Deccan College, in Poona. She gained a first class degree in English, but her gender prevented her from getting a scholarship for further studies abroad. After she had saved enough money, she went to study at the University of Oxford. Although she was a Christian, she relates in her autobiography that, because she wore a sari, the ladies of Oxford were always trying to convert her on the grounds that she looked “so very heathen”. In 1892, Cornelia became the first woman to sit a Bachelor of Law exam in England, though she was not granted the degree until after 1919, when Oxford allowed women such rights. In 1904, she joined the Bengal Civil Service as Lady Legal Adviser to the Court of Wards. When women in India acquired the right to plead before the courts of law, Cornelia applied and was admitted to the rolls of the Allahabad High Court. On marrying Justice Blair, of Allahabad High Court, Cornelia returned to England and became an author and a regular contributor to newspapers and journals. She died in 1954.

Henry Sylvester Williams

Henry Sylvester Williams was the first barrister of African descent to practise in Britain. He also organised the world's first Pan-African conference - to address the problems of African people worldwide - in London in 1900. Henry was born in 1869 in the Trinidad village of Arouca, the eldest of five children. He qualified as a teacher at the age of 17 and was in charge of a school a year later. At the age of 22 and poorly paid, he left Trinidad and headed for New York. However, in America he could only find work shining shoes and after two years enrolled at Dalhousie University in Nova Scotia, Canada, to study Law. He came to England to study at King's College, London in 1895 and two years later formed the African Association (later renamed the Pan-African Association) stating that: "the time has come when the voice of black men should be heard independently in their own affairs". He later returned to England to finish his exams and was called to the Bar (Gray's Inn) in 1902. After a year of practising as a barrister in London he went to practise in South Africa, where he stayed until 1905, and became the first black man to be admitted to the Bar in the Cape Colony. In 1906, Henry again returned to London and joined the Fabian Society. He became involved in politics and won a seat on Marylebone Borough Council. He and John Archer became among the first people of African descent to be elected to public office in Britain. Two years later, in 1908, he went back to Trinidad and set up a successful legal practice in Port of Spain, where he worked until his death in 1911.

Len Woodley QC

Len Woodley became Britain's first Queen's Counsel of Caribbean origin in 1988. Although he stepped down as Head of Chambers at the then 8 King's Bench Walk (now 1 Mitre Court) he remains an active member and law advocate.

Great minds think differently.

First we look for intellect and an enquiring mind in a trainee, secondly breadth of personality, rounded people who have a view on current affairs, people who have an interest in cultural issues outside of the law. And last but not least we want communicators. That's critical. So much of what we do is about persuasion.

Saimo Chahal

Top human rights and civil liberties lawyer Saimo Chahal is a partner and head of the Civil Liberties and Social Welfare Team at Bindmans in London. She represented Tony Nicklinson, a Locked-in Syndrome sufferer, who went to the High Court to fight to be allowed to end his life with the help of a doctor. He died on 22 August, 2012 - just six days after losing the case and was said to be “totally devastated” by the ruling. Saimo told the media that Mr Nicklinson’s wife had told her after the draft judgment was handed down on 12 August that “the fight seemed to go out of him”. He had been refusing food since the final verdict but contracted pneumonia. Her other high-profile cases included that of Debbie Purdy, an MS sufferer in favour of whom the House of Lords ruled and as a result of which the Director of Public Prosecutions (DPP) issued a new policy for prosecutors on assisted suicide. Saimo also acted for Peter Sutcliffe (referred to as “The Yorkshire Ripper” by the Press but is now known as Peter Coonan) when the High Court ruled that he will never be released from prison – an appeal against the ruling was rejected in 2011. Saimo has won numerous awards and was named Solicitor of the Year at the Law Society Excellence Awards in 2008 and Public Law and Human Rights Lawyer of the Year by the Society of Asian Lawyers in May 2011. She was named as one of the Times Law 100 most influential judges and lawyers of 2012 and was also shortlisted for the top individual award at the Law Society Excellence Awards 2012 – the Legal Personality of the Year - which was due to be announced on 18 October

SECTION 3 THE BAR

This section contains information about Queen's Counsel (or QCs as they are known), Heads of Chambers, Leading Juniors and Notable Barristers. QCs are barristers (and more recently, solicitors) who are theoretically appointed as one of the Queen's advisors. For historical purpose we have also listed barristers who were appointed QCs but no longer use the title once appointed as High Court judges. QCs are also referred to as Silks and are listed in order of seniority from the year they took silk or alphabetically if the same year. They were previously appointed by the Lord Chancellor, but since 2005 have been appointed by an independent panel.

Sir Desmond de Silva QC

Desmond de Silva QC, a barrister at Argent Chambers, is one of the country's leading Queen's Counsel and took silk in 1984 - the earliest of any barrister still practising today. He became a member of the Privy Council of the United Kingdom in October 2011 and is a former United Nations Chief War Crimes Prosecutor in Sierra Leone. In 2002, Kofi Annan, the then Secretary-General of the United Nations, appointed him as Deputy Prosecutor for the new International Criminal Tribunal for Sierra Leone at a rank of Assistant Secretary-General. In 2005 Annan promoted Sir Desmond to the post of Chief Prosecutor with the higher rank of Under Secretary-General – one of just four incumbent international Chief Prosecutors in the world. As a defence counsel, Sir Desmond has been credited by The Times as having saved more people from capital punishment in the Commonwealth than any other London-based practising member of the English Bar. Sir Desmond was born in Sri Lanka in 1939. He was knighted in the 2007 New Year Honours and is also a Knight of the Most Venerable Order of Saint John and a Knight Commander of the Royal Order of Francis I. He was called to the Bar in 1964 and was appointed as a Bencher of the Middle Temple in 2008 and Counsel to HM Revenue & Customs before VAT and Duties Tribunals the same year. He is a member of the Criminal Bar Association and the International Association of Prosecutors.

John Roberts QC CBE

In 1988 John Roberts became the first known person of African ancestry to be appointed a Queen's Counsel and became the first known person of African ancestry to become Head of Chambers in 1975. He was also the first person of African ancestry to be appointed as a Recorder of the Crown Court (1987) and to be appointed by the British Government as a High Court Judge in The Supreme Courts of the British Virgin Islands and Anguilla, British West Indies (1992). He was awarded a CBE in January 2011 for services to the administration of justice, diversity and to equal opportunities. John came to the UK from Sierra Leone in 1952 to join the Royal Air Force (RAF). After a distinguished career in the RAF, he began reading law part-time whilst working. He was called to the Bar (Gray's Inn) in 1969. In 1970 he helped set up 9 Stone Buildings and in 1975 he set up his own Chambers, 2 Stone Buildings. Apart from the English Bar, he has been called to the Bar in 10 other countries. He is a Master Bencher at Gray's Inn and is also a member of Lincoln's Inn. In 1998, aged 70, John retired from the Bench as a Recorder, as is the requirement. He also received his second honorary doctorate from the Thames Valley University in October 2009. John, who was 84 in 2012, has retired from private practice. He is a Fellow of the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators and remains a door tenant at Warwick Court Chambers.

Courtenay Griffiths QC

Courtenay Griffiths QC is a senior barrister at Garden Court Chambers - one of the best-known, largest, radical and respected Chambers in the UK. He is also a Recorder. He has been counsel in some of the most famous trials and inquests in the UK and beyond - the latest being the so-called "Blood Diamonds" trial, defending former President of Liberia Charles Taylor, in The Hague before the Special Court for Sierra Leone.

His client denied charges of crimes against humanity and war crimes and the trial lasted more than four years before the court handed down its judgment on 26 April 2012. During the trial Courtenay's cross-examinations of a supermodel, her former agent and a Hollywood actress made headlines across the world. On 30 May 2012 Taylor was jailed for 50 years. However, the judgement made it clear that he had been found guilty only of aiding and abetting and planning the crimes, rather than active participation. Courtenay's previous famous cases include the Damilola Taylor murder trial, the PC Blakelock murder trial, the Brighton bombing, the Harrods bombing and the Canary Wharf bombing to name but a few. He reached No 7 in the 2011 Powerlist, which profiles Britain's 100 most influential people of African or African Caribbean heritage, and was named 2012 Powerlist for the third successive year. Courtenay was born in Kingston, Jamaica and came to the UK in 1961 when he was five years old and the second youngest of a family of eight boys and one girl. From a young age his inspiration to become a barrister was Norman Washington Manley MM QC, the grandson of a Jamaican slave who became a fearless advocate for the dispossessed before entering politics and becoming the first Prime Minister of Jamaica in 1955. Shortly before his death in 1969 he was proclaimed a National Hero of Jamaica. Courtenay graduated from the London School of Economics in 1978 and was called to the Bar in 1980. Between 1981 and 1986, he was a Legal Assistant to the then Greater London Council's Police Committee Support Unit and later a Revson Fellow at the City College in New York. He returned to private practice in 1986, took silk in 1998 and became a Recorder of the Crown Court the following year. Courtenay has received Honorary Doctorates from both Leeds Metropolitan University and his home town university, Coventry. He is a Bencher of Gray's Inn and has chaired the Public Affairs Committee of the Bar Council – also for several years the Chair of its Race Relations Committee. He has written and lectured extensively on all aspects of the criminal justice system.

She has a predominantly Public Law/civil liberties practice, which includes Judicial Review in a wide-ranging area, Prison Law, claims against the police and other public authorities, inquests and civil orders. She also has a specialist crime and extradition practice. She was instructed as junior counsel in the Supreme Court in the controversial Judicial Review case (Hookway) where the High Court ruled that police officers could not bail suspects for more than 96 hours without either charging or releasing them, when the previous interpretation of the law (PACE) had allowed them to bail suspects for weeks, even months. The case led to emergency legislation – the Police (Detention and Bail) Act 2011 – being passed at a significantly expedited speed. Maya, who is committed to the abolition of the death penalty, continues with her pro bono work and represents those convicted of capital offences in the Caribbean before the Privy Council. She graduated in English Language and Literature from the University of Oxford and obtained her Master’s in Race and Ethnic Relations in London. Maya spent five years in the voluntary sector, working in refuges with women and children fleeing domestic violence and sexual abuse before turning to the Law. She began her legal career as junior counsel for the Commission for Racial Equality in the Stephen Lawrence Inquiry in 1998, in particular writing the closing submissions on the issue of institutional racism. Maya was a finalist in the Legal Aid Lawyer of the Year Awards in 2008, nominated for her work in the youth justice system.

Leslie Thomas

Leslie Thomas, a barrister at Garden Court Chambers, won the Legal Aid Barrister of the Year award in 2012. Leslie was commended for his empathy and desire to work for the less fortunate in society, in particular representing bereaved families at inquests. He told the audience he had started out as a commercial lawyer, which he totally hated, and had "fallen into doing inquests". Leslie was instructed on behalf of the family of Mark Duggan, the man whose death sparked the Tottenham riots, at his inquest. He is also instructed in the 2012 inquest into the death of Sean Rigg, a man with a serious mental illness who died in police custody in 2008. Leslie was called to the Bar in 1988 and Chambers and Partners 2012 says he is "undoubtedly a first choice junior for instructing solicitors in claimant police law cases. It is said that is a 'formidable opponent', he is strong on cross-examination and someone who is 'fearless and takes no prisoners.'" Leslie graduated from Kingston University, London in 1987 and spent a year at Wellington Street Chambers before joining Garden Court Chambers in 1990. His voluntary work includes sitting on the Law Society panel for the reform of inquests. He is an active member of the INQUEST Lawyers Group – a charity which provides free advice on contentious deaths to bereaved families – and served on its Management Committee. Leslie is also a former director of the Civil Liberties Trust and Liberty. He was Chair of the Central London Community Law Centre from 1990 until 2009 and still sits on its Management Committee.

HIGH COURT JUDGES

Dame Linda Dobbs

The Honourable Mrs Justice Dobbs DBE became Britain's first non-white High Court judge in 2004. Her several titles and accolades include Queen's Counsel, a number of doctorates and being a Dame of the British Empire. Linda sits in the Queen's Bench Division, which includes sitting in the Divisional and Administrative Courts and the Criminal Division of the Court of Appeal. She was called to the Bar in 1981 and took silk in 1998. Her practice (both prosecution and defence) was predominantly in white collar crime, Customs and Excise offences and disciplinary matters. She was a member and chair of several Bar Council committees, including the Race Relations and Professional Standards Committee and the Criminal Bar Association. Linda is a contributing editor to a number of legal publications and has lectured extensively to university and Bar students, magistrates, police and other professionals. She undertakes pro bono work helping to train lawyers and judges in Africa and the Caribbean. She chairs the Magisterial Committee of the Judicial Studies Board. Linda was also the Senior Liaison Judge for Diversity and was involved in many initiatives to raise awareness about the judiciary and to encourage a wider pool of applicants. She is a patron and trustee of a number of charities that reflect her interests in national and international pro bono work. Linda was voted one of the 100 Great Black Britons and was also named in the 2012 Powerlist, which profiles Britain's 100 most influential people of African or African Caribbean heritage, for the third successive year.

She was called to the Bar (Lincoln's Inn) in 1984 and was appointed as a Recorder in 2003. Judge Mensah featured in an article written by the BBC's News Home Affairs correspondent, Daniel Sandford, following the announcement in 2009 that judges in England and Wales were going to hold their first conference to try to increase the number of women and people from ethnic minorities in their ranks. Judge Mensah was cited as being the very opposite of the "Oxford-educated old buffer" cliché. Born in Ghana, she was sent to school in England, aged six. She studied philosophy at the University of Wales in Swansea before training to be a barrister. She also worked in the private sector and joined the Judiciary after sitting on a Financial Services Tribunal. Judge Mensah told Mr Sandford: "Go down any High Street now and you see such a diverse population. And when people appear in court either as witnesses or as defendants or as litigants, they want to see that reflected in the bench as well."

SECTION 5 THE LEGISLATURE AND THE EXECUTIVE

In this section you will find those who are of African, Asian, Caribbean and other ethnic minority ancestry in the UK's two Houses of Parliament (the House of Commons and the House of Lords). Those in the House of Commons are referred to as MPs and those in the Lords are peers. All Government Ministers are from one or the other House.

Paul Boateng, Baron Boateng

Paul Boateng became a peer in the House of Lords in May, 2010. He was raised to the peerage as Baron Boateng of Akyem in the Republic of Ghana and of Wembley in the London Borough of Brent. He became the UK's first black Cabinet Minister of African ancestry in May 2002, when he was appointed as Chief Secretary to the Treasury under the Labour Party Government of Tony Blair. Paul was the MP for Brent South, in London, from 1987 until 2005, when he did not stand for re-election. He was then appointed the British High Commissioner to South Africa and the British High Commissioner to the Kingdoms of Lesotho and Swaziland, posts he held until July 2009. When Paul was elected as an MP in 1987, he was among three new Parliamentarians to be the first members of the House of Commons from an ethnic minority background – the others being Bernie Grant and Diane Abbott. As a young child he moved to the Gold Coast (now Ghana) where his barrister father became a Cabinet Minister in Ghana's first Republic. Following the military coup there, Paul returned to England, aged 15. He graduated in Law from Bristol University and was admitted as a solicitor in 1975, practising at the Paddington CABx and Law Centre between 1975 and 1979. He went on to become a partner at BM Birnberg in London between 1979 and 1987. Paul specialised in civil rights matters and became well-known for this work in Lambeth, South London, in the late 1970s, regularly leading civil rights protests against the police for actions that led to the 1981 Brixton Riot. He was elected to the Greater London Council in 1981 and became the Chairman of its Police Committee and the Vice-Chairman of its Ethnic Minorities Committee. Paul retrained as a barrister and was called to the Bar (Gray's Inn) in 1989. He practised as a barrister at 8 King's Bench Walk Chambers, now 1 Mitre Court Buildings, between 1990 and 1997 before becoming a door tenant.

Helen Grant MP

Helen Grant is the joint Parliamentary Under Secretary of State at the Ministry of Justice and for Women's and Equality issues. She became the first black female Conservative MP in 2010 when she won the seat for Maidstone and the Weald at the May general election, stepping into the shoes of well-known Tory Ann Widdecombe, who stood down. Before standing as a prospective Parliamentary candidate, Helen was a senior partner in her firm, Grants Solicitors, based in Croydon, which is now managed by her husband. She established the firm, which specialises in dealing with the problems of family breakdown and the victims of racial, ethnic, homophobic and religious hate, in 1996. In February 2011 Operation Black Vote hailed her as "the people's chaMPion", applauding her iMPassioned plea that the Government should tread carefully over proposed cuts to Legal Aid, which could have a "devastating effect" on the poorest and most vulnerable in society. Helen was born in London to a single mother and was brought up on a council estate in Carlisle for much of her early childhood. She graduated in Law from the University of Hull and attended the College of Law in Guildford before qualifying as a solicitor in 1988. She is a member of the Commons Justice Select Committee; a member of the Parliamentary support team for the Home Office; Vice-Chairman of the All Party Parliamentary Group for the Armed Forces, Army Division; a member of the Armed Forces Parliamentary Scheme; a member of the Conservative Party Family Law Reform Commission and a member of the Conservative Party Social Justice Policy Group (Family Division). Helen is also a patron of the Maidstone region of national charity Tomorrow's People, whose mission is to break the cycle of unemployment and dependency by helping the most disadvantaged to get, and keep, a job.

Sadiq Khan MP

Sadiq Khan has been the Labour MP for Tooting, South West London, since 2005 and became the Shadow Secretary of State for Justice in October 2010. In 2009 Sadiq became the first Asian and first Muslim to ever attend Cabinet when he was appointed as Secretary of State for Transport. He was also only the second Muslim Privy Counsellor – the first one being Syed Ameer Ali exactly a century before. He was named as one of the Times Law 100 most influential judges and lawyers of 2012. Sadiq studied Law at the University of North London (later becoming a visiting lecturer there). He completed his Law Society finals at the College of Law in Guildford before then training as a human rights solicitor and went on to become a founding partner of one of the country's leading human rights firms, Christian Khan (with Louise Christian). He practised as a solicitor for 11 years and was listed by Chambers and Partners as one of the country's leading lawyers in human rights and police law. He was also chair of the civil liberties pressure group Liberty for three years. Following his election as an MP, Sadiq won Newcomer of the Year in The Spectator magazine's Parliamentarian of the Year awards; was runner-up for Channel 4's Rising Star award; and was awarded the Muslim News Award for Excellence in 2009. In May 2011 he announced the members of the Labour Party's Justice Policy Working Group – one of whom was Matthew Ryder QC - and launched a website for consultation on Labour's justice policy.

David Lammy MP

David Lammy became the youngest qualifying barrister in England in 1994 and went on to become the youngest Member of Parliament at the age of 27. He was named in the 2012 Powerlist, which profiles Britain's 100 most influential people of African or African Caribbean heritage. David is currently a back bench opposition MP. Previously he was the Minister for Higher Education and Intellectual Property in the Department for Innovation, Universities and Skills. In 2005, when he was the Minister for Culture, Media and Sport, he played an important part in overseeing Liverpool's role as European Capital of Culture in 2008 and the Cultural Olympiad running up to 2012. David became the MP for Tottenham - where he was born and raised as one of five children by a single mother - at a by-election in June 2000, following the death of Bernie Grant. He was re-elected the following year and became the first Tottenham MP to hold a Government position since 1945. The 2012 Powerlist said his profile was higher than it ever was after the Tottenham riots in 2011 and that he is likely to be one of the most influential figures in rebuilding the London borough. The feature said he had a genuine connection with the area and remains young enough to empathise with many of the social problems affecting inner city youth. David studied Law at the School of Oriental and African Studies in 1990 and then attended the Inns of Court School of Law. He went on to become the first black Briton to study a Master of Laws at the Harvard Law School in 1997. He was politically active throughout his university life and worked part-time as a volunteer for the Free Representation Unit. He did a placement in Jamaica, working for Amnesty International and volunteered in Thailand for Prisoners Abroad. He practised as a lawyer in London and California, specialising in medical ethics, negligence and commercial litigation.

Lord Taylor of Warwick became the first black Conservative peer and also one of the youngest peers in the House of Lords in 1996 at the age of 42. He was awarded a CBE in 1992 for his political service. However, in May 2011 he was jailed for 12 months when he became the first peer to be found guilty in the Parliamentary expenses scandal. He was released under home detention just three months later and is currently suspended from Parliament. The Bar Standards Board disbarred him on 25 May 2012 as a result of his criminal conviction. Born in Birmingham in 1952, his father was a professional cricketer who played for Warwickshire and the West Indies. Lord Taylor attended Moseley Grammar School and graduated in Law in 1976 from Keele University where, in his final year, he won the Gray's Inn Advocacy Prize. He was called to the Bar in 1978 and was appointed as a Judge in 1997. In 1999 he was awarded an Honorary Doctorate in Laws (LLD) by Warwick University. He first got involved in politics in 1986 when he became a Borough Councillor in Solihull. Lord Taylor went on to become a Special Adviser to the Home Secretary and Ministers of State between 1990 and 1991. He introduced the legislative Bill which is now the Criminal Evidence Amendment Act 1997.

Chuka Umunna MP

Chuka Umunna was elected as the Labour MP for Streatham on 6 May 2010 and after less than 18 months in Parliament he was promoted to the Shadow Cabinet as Shadow Business Secretary on 7 October 2011. When Chuka won the Streatham seat he became the first ever MP for the constituency to have been born and bred there and the first person of black parentage to represent one of the three Parliamentary constituencies covering the Brixton area. Within a month of becoming an MP he was elected by his colleagues to serve on the prestigious Treasury Select Committee and in October 2010 was appointed as Parliamentary Private Secretary to Ed Miliband, the Labour Party leader. He was then made Shadow Minister for Small Business and Enterprise before taking up his current post. He was named in the 2012 Powerlist, which profiles Britain's 100 most influential people of African or African Caribbean heritage, which said he was "without doubt the standout new member of Parliament of the past year". Chuka attended the Christ Church Primary School in Brixton Hill and went on to obtain a degree in English Law and French Law from Manchester University in 2001. He spent some time at the University of Burgundy before doing his Legal Practice Course at the Nottingham School of Law. Chuka joined the international law firm Herbert Smith as a trainee in 2002 and qualified in September 2004. As an eMPloyment lawyer he moved to Rochman Landau in April 2006, where he stayed until he was elected to Parliament. He is a board member of Generation Next, which provides activities for young people in London, and is a patron of Latimer Creative Media, which trains young people in digital media.

Keith Vaz MP

Keith Vaz is a Labour MP and Chair of the influential Home Affairs Select Committee. In November 2011 he was named as the third most influential Asian in the country by publications Garavi Gujarat (GG2) and Eastern Eye (EE) and was named as one of the Times Law 100 most influential judges and lawyers of 2012. Keith was re-elected in May 2010 for the sixth time as the MP for Leicester East, having first won the seat in 1987. He is now the longest-serving ethnic minority MP in the UK Parliament. Before becoming an MP he had been a solicitor at the Highfields and Belgrave Law Centre in Leicester since 1985. Previously he had been the Senior Solicitor at the London Borough of Islington between 1982 and 1985 and before that was a solicitor at Richmond Council. Keith was born in Aden, Yemen, in 1956 and his family, originally from Goa, India, moved to Britain in 1965. He was educated at Latymer Upper School, Hammersmith and graduated from Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge in 1979, obtaining his Master in Laws from the university in 1987. Keith has held a number of Government posts: Minister of State for Europe (1999–2001); Parliamentary Secretary (Minister), Lord Chancellor's Department (May–October 1999); and Parliamentary Private Secretary to the Attorney General, John Morris and Solicitor General, Lord Falconer QC (June 1997–May 1999). He previously served as a member of the Constitutional Affairs Select Committee, as Chair of its Sub-Committee for Courts and the Judiciary, and was a member of the Home Affairs Select Committee (1987–1992). Between 1993 and 1994 he was a Member of the Executive Committee of the Inter-Parliamentary Union. He is a member of the Labour Party's National Executive Committee and Chair of the Labour Party's Ethnic Minority Taskforce. He was re-elected as Chair of the Home Affairs Select Committee in July 2010 for a five-year term in a vote of the whole House of Commons.

Sayeeda Warsi, Baroness Warsi

Sayeeda Hussain Warsi holds a dual post as the Minister of State at the Foreign Office as well as the Minister for Faith and Communities at the Ministry of Communities and Local Government. Sayeeda has notched several firsts, including being the youngest member of the House of Lords in 2007 (aged 36) and in the same year she made history as the first Muslim member of any Cabinet or Shadow Cabinet when she became the Shadow Minister for Community Cohesion and Social Action. In 2010 she was appointed Co-Chairman, with Lord Feldman, of the Conservative Party and was also appointed Minister without Portfolio (a Cabinet post) and a Privy Counsellor, the first Muslim woman to hold a Cabinet post and appointed Privy Counsellor. In September 2012 she took up her current ministerial posts following the Coalition Government's first major Cabinet reshuffle. Sayeeda notched up her political "first" when the Conservative Party selected her for the 2005 General Election as its first Muslim woman Prospective. She became a special adviser to Michael Howard QC – the former leader of the Conservative Party - and was then appointed as Vice Chairman of the Conservative Party with specific responsibility for Cities. In November 2011 she was named as the second most powerful Asian in the country by publications Garavi Gujarat (GG2) and Eastern Eye (EE). In March 2009 she was featured as Britain's most powerful Muslim woman in the first Muslim Women Power List. Sayeeda was educated at Birkdale High School, Dewsbury and read Law at the University of Leeds. She attended the York College of Law to coMPlete the Legal Practice Course and then trained with the Crown Prosecution Service and the Home Office, Immigration Department. After qualifying as a solicitor, she worked for Whitfield Hallam Goodall Solicitors before setting up her own specialist practice, George Warsi Solicitors.

SECTION 9 THE GROUPS

There are various black and minority ethnic (BME) legal groups and associations and in this section we feature some of the most senior members, particularly the Chairs and immediate past Chairs.

The Law Society

supporting solicitors

Our commitment

The Law Society is committed to representing every member of the solicitors' profession and to supporting the profession in its efforts to reflect the society it serves.

Partnership working

We deliver on that commitment by working in partnerships with BME groups and associations, consulting and campaigning on key issues, sponsoring headline events like the Minority Lawyers Conference and celebrating occasions such as Black History Month.

Flagship initiative

Our Diversity and Inclusion Charter, developed with the Society of Asian Lawyers and BT, is the flagship diversity initiative of the legal profession. It is an instantly recognisable public statement of commitment by its signatories and a framework for positive action across all strands of diversity.

Boma Ozobia is the senior partner at the law firm Sterling Partnership, a cross border, multi-jurisdictional law firm. She made legal history in February 2011 when she was elected as the first female President of the Commonwealth Lawyers Association in Hyderabad, India. The Commonwealth Lawyers Association represents lawyers from all 54 Commonwealth countries as well as Law Societies and Bar Associations from the Commonwealth. Previously, in 2005, she achieved a similar first, when she became the national Chair of the Association of Women Solicitors (AWS), the first person of ethnic minority origin to hold this position since the AWS was established 83 years earlier. As Chair she was the official representative of the group, with a responsibility for representing thousands of solicitors (currently around 20,000). Boma read Law at Rivers State University of Science and Technology in 1987 and was called to the Nigerian Bar in 1988. She obtained a Master's in Maritime Law from King's College, University of London, in 1989 and qualified as a solicitor in 2000. Boma's specialism is International Commercial Law, Maritime Law and Dispute Resolution. She is an accredited Civil and Commercial Mediator and won the London Borough of Southwark Woman Entrepreneur Award in 2007 for her innovative and family-friendly management style. Boma serves on the Executive Committee of the British Nigeria Law Forum and is the co-author of the books Sisters in Law – Career Choices for Nigerian Women Lawyers and Survival Manual for New Wigs.

Nazir Afzal OBE

Nazir Afzal OBE, the Chief Crown Prosecutor for the North West of England, was in the news in 2012 during the Rochdale grooming trial, which resulted in a gang of nine men being convicted of grooming young girls for sex by plying them with drink and drugs. It emerged that when Nazir took up his post in 2011, one of the first things he did was to reverse the decision made by a CPS lawyer in 2008 not to proceed with a rape allegation involving an under-age girl. That decision could have left the sex grooming ring undetected for years and Nazir said it had been “wrong” to drop the case. He said the lawyer had viewed six hours of video testimony from the girl and also had DNA evidence, but decided “she would not be viewed as a credible witness by a jury”. Nazir said his decision to prosecute the two men involved was based on 20 years’ experience, including expertise in rape cases. Those two men were among the gang of nine jailed in May 2012 for a total of 77 years for sexually exploiting young girls. The CPS’s dropping of the original case led police to stop all investigations, a decision that is now the subject of separate inquiry.

Shereener Browne

Shereener Browne, a barrister at Garden Court Chambers, won the Sydney Elland Goldsmith Bar Pro Bono Award in November 2011. The award, set up in 1996 to recognise those who demonstrate an inspirational commitment to pro bono work, was presented by the Attorney General at the Annual Bar Conference. Lord Goldsmith, who led the judging panel, said: "This year's winner exemplifies my belief that pro bono is part of being a barrister. Despite existing personal commitments and the challenge of moving to a completely new practice area at the Bar, Shereener Browne has worked tirelessly on pro bono cases with little fanfare. Testimonials emphasise Shereener's willingness to go far beyond her original instructions in order to achieve the right outcome for her clients and this dedication has not gone unnoticed by colleagues and contemporaries. Shereener's ongoing commitment to pro bono work undoubtedly influences those around her to take on their own pro bono work." Shereener's pupillage was at the chambers of Sibghat Kadri QC, 6 King's Bench Walk, where she became a tenant in 1997. She continued to specialise in criminal defence when she moved the Garden Court and regularly appeared in crown courts across the country, becoming counsel of choice to firms specialising in young defendants charged with serious gang-related violence, but switched to Employment Law in 2009. Shereener graduated in Law from London South Bank University and was called to the Bar (Inner Temple) in 1996. She is now an advocacy teacher for the Inner Temple.

Courtenay Griffiths QC

Courtenay Griffiths QC, a senior barrister at Garden Court Chambers, received global media attention as the lead counsel in the so-called "Blood Diamonds" trial, defending former President of Liberia Charles Taylor, in The Hague before the Special Court for Sierra Leone. His client denied charges of crimes against humanity and war crimes and the trial lasted more than four years before the court handed down its judgment on 26 April 2012. During the trial Courtenay's cross-examinations of a supermodel, her former agent and a Hollywood actress made headlines across the world. On 30 May 2012 Taylor was jailed for 50 years. However, the judgement made it clear that he had been found guilty only of aiding and abetting and planning the crimes, rather than active participation.

No5 Chambers is proud to support Black Letter Law

No5 Chambers has developed a reputation for breaking new ground and continues to be regarded as a progressive and forward-thinking set.

We are one of the largest set of chambers in the UK with 26 Silks and more than 200 tenants.

Our thriving business points to its principles of equality of opportunity to all as one of the major factors of its continued success.

Our recruitment policy naturally aims to select only those candidates with the intellectual, presentational and personal skills essential to succeed at the Bar.

For more information visit our website www.No5.com or contact Practice Director Tony McDaid on Tel: +44 (0) 845 210 5555 or Email: info@no5.com

No5 Chambers provides services on an equal opportunity basis

Our commitment

The Law Society is committed to representing every member of the solicitors' profession and to supporting the profession in its efforts to reflect the society it serves.

Partnership working

We deliver on that commitment by working in partnerships with BME groups and associations, consulting and campaigning on key issues, sponsoring headline events like the Minority Lawyers Conference and celebrating occasions such as Black History Month.

Flagship initiative

Our Diversity and Inclusion Charter, developed with the Society of Asian Lawyers and BT, is the flagship diversity initiative of the legal profession. It is an instantly recognisable public statement of commitment by its signatories and a framework for positive action across all strands of diversity.
